Things to Listen or Read This Week

"That's one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind."

This week it is a podcast, with very special guest TOM HANKS, actor, filmmaker and expert on all things Apollo-related, to discuss the epic saga of how humankind made it to the Moon and back. This week's podcast is a long one, but it is very interesting. Click here to listen.

Poetry Slam

Yesterday was the annual Greenvale Poetry Slam where each class performed their poems in front of the whole school. Every class performance was truly amazing and unique. Well done to all of the children for taking part! The winners this year are Year 5 with their original poem!

Times Table Rock Star Day

Today at Greenvale we celebrated Times Table Rock Stars Day! Times Table Rock Stars is an online platform to which we subscribe which supports children in learning their times tables and division facts. Children from Year 2 upwards have access to this and are advised to use this resource at least weekly at home to ensure that their table's knowledge is kept to a standard which supports their learning in the classroom. Everyone looked amazing today dressed as their rockstar in neon and glam rock outfits. During the week, we have been holding a competition to see which class earned the most coins during the week. The winning class are Year 5 who have won themselves a film afternoon with popcorn.

Year 3 Cookery

As part of their new DT topic, this week Year 3 have been making nut-free pesto using fresh ingredients and following a simple recipe. They then got to taste their pesto on some bread which the children all enjoyed and said it was delicious!
